Is It Smarter For Us To Take Live Jap Prisoners?
The island of Tinian is gradually being cleared of Japs by the novel method of getting them to surrender instead of shooting them one by one.

By Cpl. JUStin GRAY
TANK Staff Correspondent

The island of Tinian was occupied by the Japanese for only one month. It was captured by the Allies on July 25, 1944. The Japanese were forced to surrender.

The island of Tinian was captured by the Allies on July 25, 1944. The Japanese were forced to surrender.

The island of Tinian was captured by the Allies on July 25, 1944. The Japanese were forced to surrender.

The island of Tinian was captured by the Allies on July 25, 1944. The Japanese were forced to surrender.

The island of Tinian was captured by the Allies on July 25, 1944. The Japanese were forced to surrender.

The island of Tinian was captured by the Allies on July 25, 1944. The Japanese were forced to surrender.

The island of Tinian was captured by the Allies on July 25, 1944. The Japanese were forced to surrender.

The island of Tinian was captured by the Allies on July 25, 1944. The Japanese were forced to surrender.

The island of Tinian was captured by the Allies on July 25, 1944. The Japanese were forced to surrender.